

Games Tigers Play

Whenever there is downtime, there is time to play a game. Games are an amazing way for us to connect with each other and to keep our minds focused on the positive! That being said, using the Tiger Adventure- Games Tigers Play is a great way to get to thinking about games and not just the ones that we all know and love already.

Teambuilding games build communication and connection between players. One such game is Blind Drawing. One person is the artist and chooses a picture and holds the idea of their picture in their head. The other group members listen only to the words of the artist and try to draw what they artist describes. Pictures created from Blind Drawing are often cause uncontrollable laughter. This game works on communication and precise language. If you want to have a little more fun and make it a little more challenging, you can ask those who are drawing to close their eyes while doing so, making the drawing double blind.

The best part of playing games is making up new games! Let your scouts mind run wild while they come up with and play a new game. It could be a twist on an old game-like hide and go seek in the house in the dark or their games could be entirely new! You never know where a young imagination can take you! You can help this process by giving them random home items like a spatula and a few pennies and see what they come up with. Then of course, play the game together! Following the imagination of a young child and letting them tell the rules empowers them and allows for some hilarious results! Tell us about the games you have played!
